On Wednesday I was in my car driving, and I was in the left turning lane making a 'u'. The light turned green and I started to make my u turn. There was a car behind me wanting to make a left. As I proceeded to make that 'u' turn I noticed that the car behind was really close. Too close for me to complete a 'u' turn safely. Then as I came into the middle of the inner section a car, from the other side started to make a right hand turn, and I had to slam on my brakes. At that time I thought that a u turn blinker would be good, because all parties would be informed, before I made a u turn. When I came home I made this note and simple drawing.
